CISO SUPPORT PROGRAM

Overview

The cyber threat landscape is dynamic and organisations need cutting edge support to stay ahead of risk. The reality is, most organisations are challenged with having security requirements and limited staffing options. CRI's advisors are available to perform or support the function of your Chief Information Security Officer. This enables your organisation to focus on critical IT projects, while still ensuring that security is being driven forward.

CRI's Chief Information Security Officer Support Program service allows you to leverage the executive leadership skills of a CRI security and compliance expert who has previous practical CISO experience. Our experts serve as confidential thought partners allowing your executives the opportunity to brainstorm, cross check ideas, and get advice from industry leaders. CRI trusted advisors help you stay vigilant about incoming threats – now and in the future. More specifically, Chief Information Security Officer Support services enable you to leverage the experience and skills of a CRI senior security consultant.

How It Works

CRI via a retainer model serve as an expert advisor to senior management in the development, implementation, and maintenance of a cyber security strategy and framework that ensures that security and privacy best practice control objectives are achieved for the organisation.
